Inspired by the sinuous scrolls and flowers favoured during the Elizabethan era, this panel celebrates the colour and exuberance of 16th century embroidery.

Inspired by the sinuous scrolls and flowers favoured during the Elizabethan era, this panel celebrates the colour and exuberance of 16th century embroidery but eschews the techniques used at that time for more contemporary and flexible stitches.

Using a combination of stranded and filament silk threads, thread padding and surface embroidery techniques, these beautiful floral motifs are just as appealing now as they were centuries ago.
